Job Description

The College of Education at Wayne State University is located in the heart of Detroit's rapidly revitalizing Midtown area. The college is seeking an Assistant Dean for Teacher Education to provide leadership in executing its mission to "prepare effective urban educators and scholars who are reflective, innovative, and committed to diversity." Wayne State University is a Carnegie Tier 1 research university, and one of 34 public urban research universities in the U.S. with a strong commitment to urban education. The College of Education serves over 2,500 undergraduate and graduate students across 30 degree programs, housed within four academic divisions: Teacher Education; Administrative and Organizational Studies; Theoretical and Behavioral Foundations; and, Kinesiology, Health and Sport Studies. Beyond academics, the College has many active scholars with over $7 million annually in external funding to support their work.

The Division of Teacher Education offers Undergraduate, Master's, Educational Specialist, and Doctoral programs to 1,000 students. Our Bachelor's, Master's, and Post-Bachelor's programs provide students with a number of routes to initial teacher certification and additional teaching endorsements at
