Institutions of Higher Education, placing it among the highest level of research institutions in the United States.

Candidates for this position should exhibit the ability to engage in a rigorous research agenda on topics related to the community college, publish in peer-reviewed research journals and outlets, and generate research-related grant activity. The candidates for this position are expected to teach synchronous distance courses and face-to-face courses for students in the Community College Leadership program in our 1-week summer institute.

Responsibilities

- Engage in scholarly activity (e.g., publish in peer-reviewed journals, grant activity)
- Teach (hybrid, face-to-face, and online) courses
- Develop courses and contribute to program design, development, evaluation, and improvement
- Provide service to the program, department, university and profession
- Effectively recruit, guide, and advise community college leadership graduate students
- Chair and serve on doctoral dissertation committees

Minimum required education and/or special licenses, registrations, trainings, or certifications

An earned doctorate from a regionally accredited university in community college leadership, workforce development, or a closely related field.

Minimum required level and type of experience, knowledge, skills, and abilities

1. Doctoral degree in community college leadership, workforce development, or a closely related field.
2. Familiarity with leadership and administration of community and technical colleges.
3. Plan to maintain an established record of scholarly research and publication appropriate for a Research University (very high research activity).
4. Clear commitment to interdisciplinary and collaboration with faculty in and outside of the institution.
5. Student-centered teaching philosophy and potential for effective instruction.
6. Ability to obtain large funded research as PI or Co-PI.
7. Trained in research methods, including both quantitative and qualitative methods, with the ability to teach and advise dissertations.
