related to higher education, publish in peer-reviewed research journals and outlets, and generate research-related grant activity. The candidate for this position is expected to teach synchronous distance courses and face-to-face courses for students in the Higher Education Program. We invite applicants from all social and cultural backgrounds to apply, and we encourage applications from candidates from minoritized communities who can add to the diversity and excellence at our minority-serving institution.

Responsibilities:

- Conduct an active scholarship agenda leading to refereed publications, other forms of scholarship, and external grant funding.
- Teach face-to-face and synchronous distance courses for master's, education specialist, and Ph.D. students.
- Mentor/advise students at all graduate levels.
- Lead and serve on doctoral dissertation committees.
- Collaborate with state, national, and international higher education leaders.
- Actively engage in professional service organizations within the university and the profession.

Minimum Qualifications - knowledge, skills, and abilities

- 3-5 years of professional experience in an administrative position at a four-year institution of higher education or related agency or organization.
- Evidence of scholarly, published research in peer-reviewed journals.
- A well-developed research agenda.
- Demonstrated ability to assume teaching responsibilities both in face-to-face and distance learning contexts, effectively incorporating technology in both.
- Demonstrated ability to contribute to a culture of collaboration, inclusion, equity, and diversity.
- Established teaching philosophy and demonstrated potential for effective postsecondary instruction.

Minimum Qualifications - Education or training

A doctorate degree from a regionally accredited university in Higher Education, or a related field.

Minimum Qualifications - Special licenses, registration or certification
